CRABTREE & MAGGIE
Davenport

A long-time, active member of Sarasota's real estate community, Broker Associate Michelle Crabtree has expanded her business into a second generation by joining forces with her stepdaughter Maggie Davenport. Both women grew up here, have an abiding love for the area and an enthusiasm for helping others find the right Sarasota-Manatee home. They are based in Premier Sotheby's International Realty's Lakewood Ranch office, but frequently work from the downtown office.

Crabtree has worked in Sarasota real estate since the early 1980s. "I once marketed Sarasota as a small community with big city amenities," she said. "We definitely have been discovered now, but still have that community feel." As a third generation local, Crabtree has built her business on her extensive knowledge of the area as well as an unwavering commitment to her profession and customer service. She has many professional certifications and serves on the Board of Directors for the Realtor Association of Sarasota and Manatee.

Davenport came to Sarasota in 1992. Enchanted with the area, she stayed, earning a fine arts degree from the Ringling College of Art and Design. A people person who places special emphasis on good client communication, Davenport has a particular expertise in the bayfront arts area from Ringling College to the burgeoning downtown core. "Michelle and I complement each other and work well together," Davenport said. "I really enjoy using my creative skills to develop advertising to promote clients' houses." Both women are active in the community. Crabtree is a member of the Junior League and is on the Board for Habitat for Humanity of Sarasota. Davenport regularly donates her paintings for charity fundraisers and currently serves on the Board for Healthy Start Coalition of Sarasota County.
